RADIO AND ELECTRONICS stores are hard-pressed to meet demand for special $75 radios that receive FM broadcasts of 152-megacycle frequency.

Here's why: Cincinnati Police Department's Station X converted from AM (1730 kilocycles) to FM this week. Station X apparently has a large following of fans willing to pay $75 to stay tuned.

Formerly, anyone with an ordinary radio could join vicariously in pursuit of thieves, arrests of drunks. (Or listen to code signals they didn't understand.)
